[REDACTED] personality is very cheerful, I think

PROS:

- cheerful, laidback.
- comfortable to be vulnerable with.
- very empathetic, sensitive.
- outgoing.
- ~~very understanding~~ focused on work.
- honest, so it's easier to ask and know what is going on in his head.
- relatively very calm... compared to me.
- open to change.
- trustworthy.

CONS:

- rigid about some things and concepts, which sometimes leaves the other person feeling they get no recognition or understanding.
- sometimes a little too laidback, from what I've seen in group projects.
- sometimes closing off to ideas or some people until your personal views change.
- You should talk without about your opinions and experiences sometimes without being prompted. (eg. work) / you should express yourself more frequently (?)

anyway?

Feedback:

- Before taking action, try and stop for a moment, think about what you wanna do, and then work on it. Think about your opinions, your feelings, then work. Think before doing.
- Be more consistent with your efforts.
- Be on time, and in turn be more reliable.
- Focus on individuality. What do you wanna say?
- Put in more efforts: more can be achieved.
- Push yourself to your limits, only then will you start to improve.
- Sketch more.

I've tried to implement these.

- Overthinking and doubting myself.

Late again to the English class, it felt so empty. I would rather journal than put it all out. My personal experiences in a letter and with myself. Communication is really not my cup of tea.

All my things like should be kept drained - to the paper, at least they might find purpose there. Letting it all out is not something I can do again.

I would rather keep the lid on it and try and see if it can be calmed down. I don't feel like denouncing any more. I would, should rather not put it out ever again.

How do people just say: 'I don't get it'?

Being a little extra. Virtual has its experience to shed
